What does it mean to revoke? To take something back. To refuse the roles, images and desires through which we have learned to recognise ourselves.

Opening on Friday, 30 October 2026, REVOKE brings together 65 international photographers in the first exhibition organised by Revoke Photo Collective. Curated by Linda Zhengová, the exhibition explores revocation as an act of resistance, rupture and reinvention, asking what becomes possible when we refuse the familiar and challenge the narratives we have inherited.

Revocation arrives as both a political and intimate gesture: a refusal of imposed identities, established conventions and ways of seeing that no longer serve us. Photography occupies an ambivalent position within this process. It records and appropriates, exposes and conceals, preserving certain realities while leaving others unseen. Through diverse photographic perspectives, REVOKE invites audiences to consider this exhibition as a space from which alternative possibilities can emerge.
